

January 4, 2007

Biodiesel Product Information

Pure biodiesel is actually an agricultural product. As it is not eaten, but rather used for fuel it can be a bit challenging to find biodiesel product information. If you are looking for information about suppliers or different types of biodiesel then your best bet is to search for information at the National Biodiesel Board.

The National Biodiesel Board makes recommendations to consumers to make sure that you know what biodiesel is and that any biodiesel fuel that is purchased meets the ASTM specification for pure biodiesel (ASTM D 6751). This biodiesel product information is essential for those who are considering blending pure biodiesel with diesel fuel. The specification for biodiesel is designed to ensure that consumers will not experience operational problems (especially accidents!) from the fuel's use. Make sure that the merchant who sells you this biodiesel can provide you with written assurance that the biodiesel meets this specification. One of the benefits of buying at the sites recommended by the national biodiesel board is that it also features the lowest biodiesel prices for quality diesel fuel.